Ashok's family deceives the people by heaping huge amounts of black money, and to escape income tax troubles, politicians are being bribed enormously. Ironically, a great socialist who proclaims to be fighting for the rights of the working class joins the group of bribed individuals and allegedly exploits ordinary people. The ministers, irrespective of their party affiliations, sell their favors to business magnates in exchange for bribes of lakhs. Ashok's bribes are just the tip of the iceberg, which includes countless wealthy families in India.

Copy/Line edited text

Ashok's family engages in the accumulation of significant amounts of undisclosed funds, commonly referred to as black money, thereby deceiving the public. In order to evade income tax obligations, politicians are extensively bribed. It is ironic that a prominent socialist figure, ostensibly advocating for the interests of the working class, aligns with the group involved in bribery and purportedly exploits the common citizens. Regardless of their political affiliations, ministers compromise their integrity by offering their support and services to influential business magnates in exchange for substantial bribes. The instance of Ashok's bribery serves as a mere glimpse into a pervasive issue, as numerous affluent families in India partake in similar practices, constituting a systemic problem.
