

Found My Soul in You

Clock strikes twelve
My heart feels to dwell
Thoughts make me fear
My cheeks roll up with tears
Honestly do not want to weep
But I'm destined to reap
My days were lost to high expectation
Life now is an exceptional submission.
Sometimes mind needs rest
Thinking of life ends with cardiac arrest
Once proudly calling myself single
But now my conscience insists me to mingle
To feel, like any ordinary soul,
However, hiding that, proves my extraordinary role
I was then, so rational
But now confined into emotional
Calamity struck my heart's domain,
Your presence drives me from the pain

Crossed many troublesome maze
Bracing your thoughts does amaze
Being with you, I fly high
That would make others sigh
You're my everything
For me - Rest is nothing.
